

The Sun Family

China-Born Chicago G.I. Wounded

Pfc. Jay Y. Sun Jr., 22 a Chicago youth born in China, has been wounded in the Korean fighting.

PFC. SUN

His father is the owner of the Chinese Emporium, 149 Cermak rd., Chinatown department store and importing firm.

"I DIDN'T like fighting against Chinese, but I was fighting for my country the United States," Jay wrote in a letter to his mother.

He has relatives in Hong Kong, Canton and Formosa," his mother, Mrs. Margaret Sun told the Daily News.

Jay was struck by shrapnel April 22 near Pusong while fighting with an engineer unit. His right leg was broken in several places.

HE HOPES his leg won't keep him from playing baseball," his mother said.

"He was first baseman for the Chinatown Dragons, a team sponsored by the Chinese Merchants Association."

"Jay spoke about playing with the White Sox, although his father is a Cub fan," his mother said.

Jay is in Fitzsimmons General Hospital, Denver, where he was flown shortly after being wounded. Doctors say it may be a year

Patient Of The Week

PFC. JAY Y. SUN, JR., has a record very different from most of our decorated heroes. He has been in the Army less than a year, overseas less than a month, and now he is back in the United States wearing a Purple Heart and the Korean service ribbon.

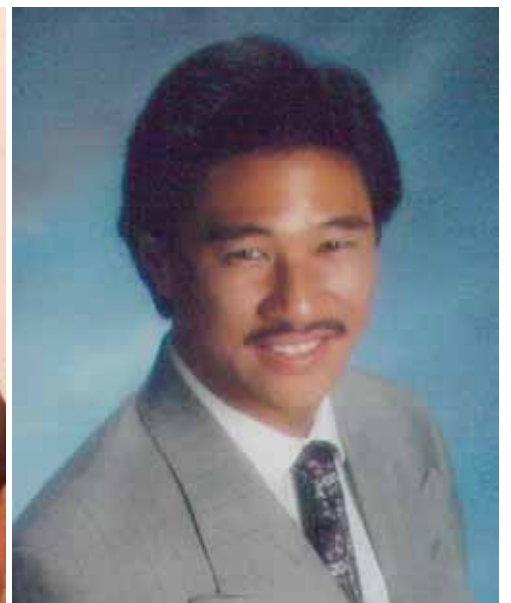

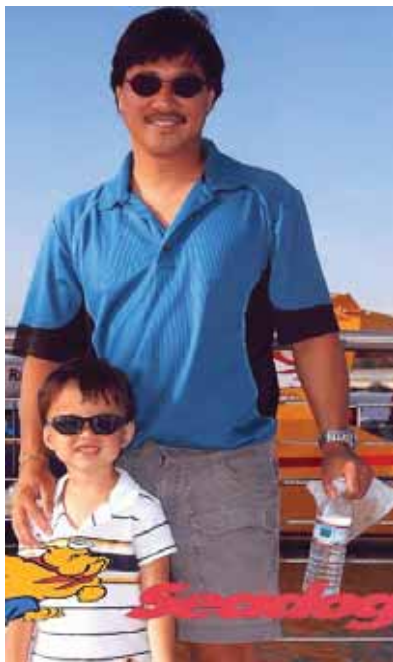

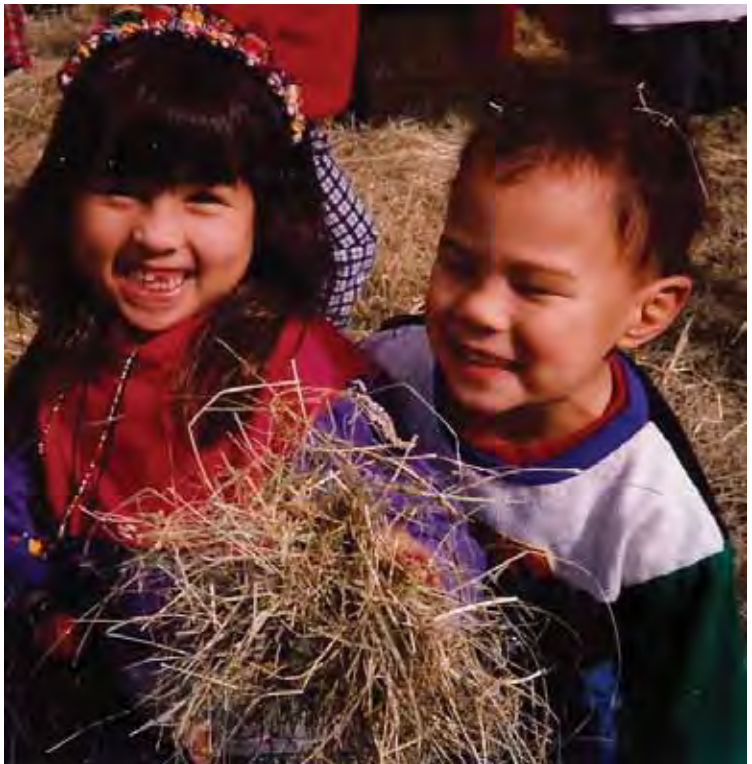

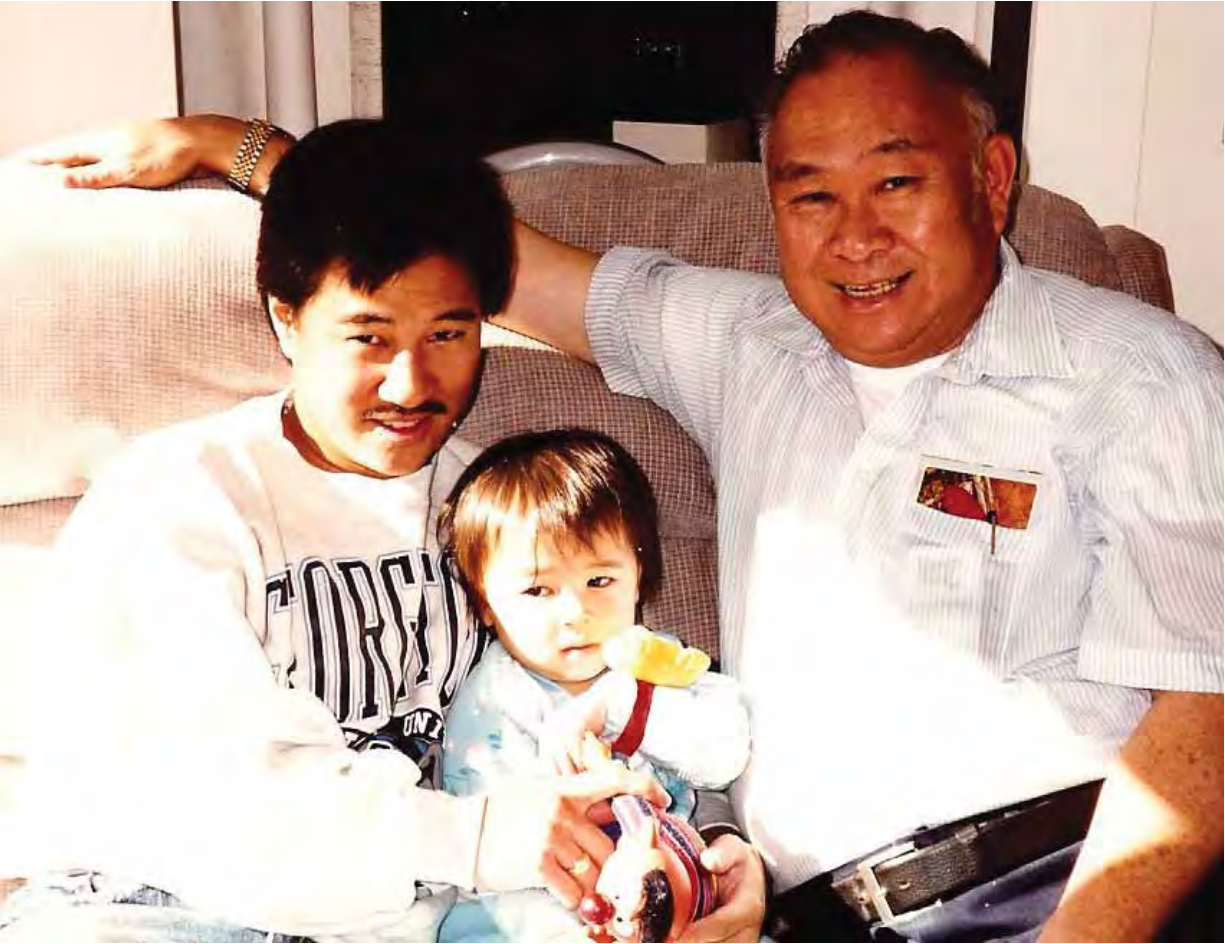

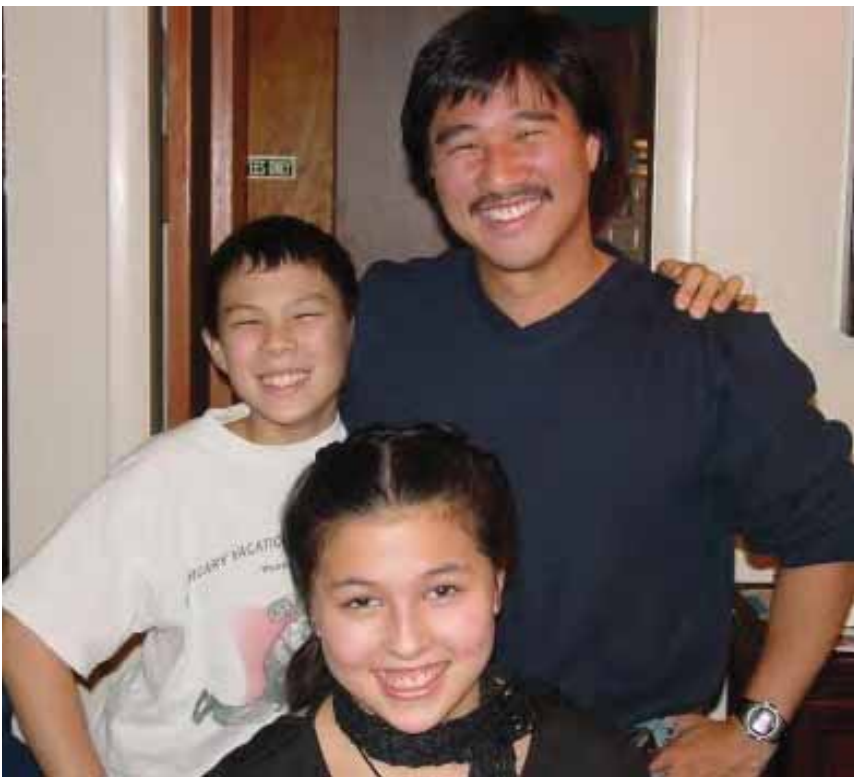

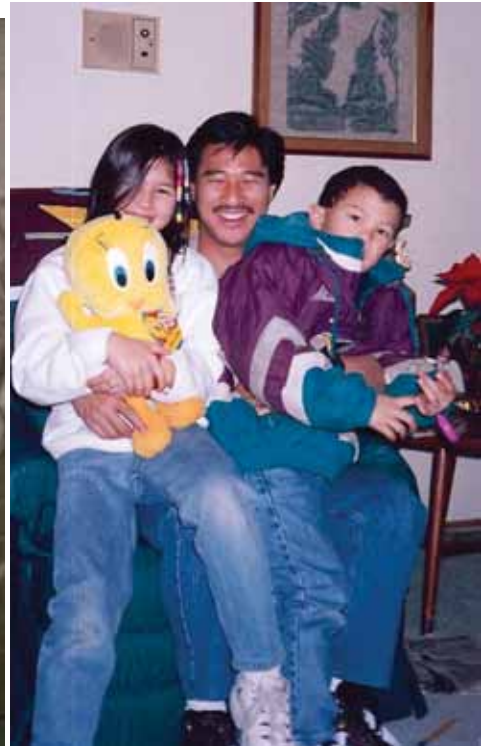

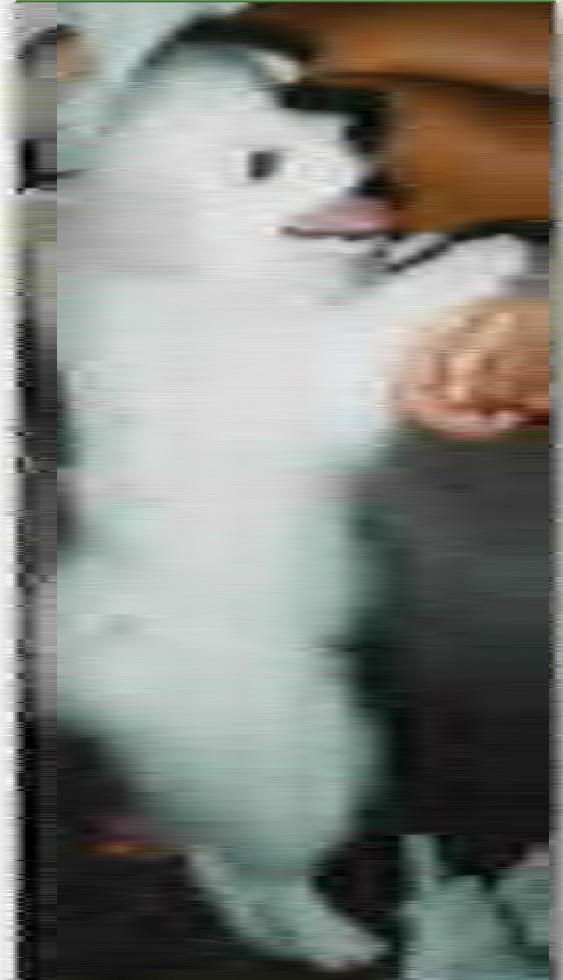

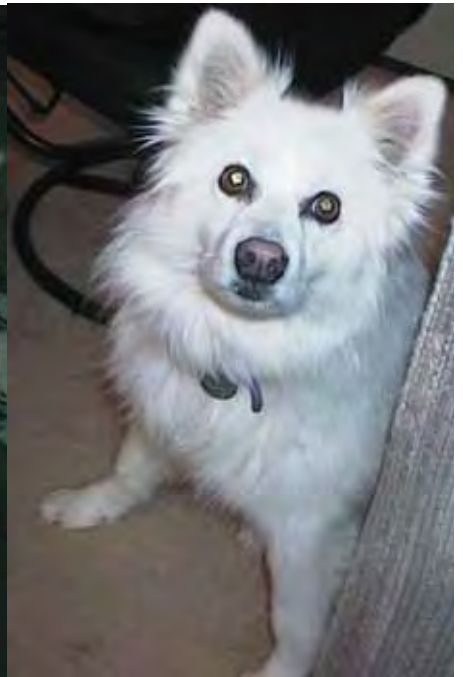

Malibu Bear

Sept 1989 - June 2006

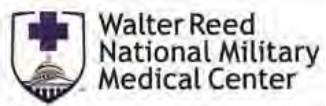

2016

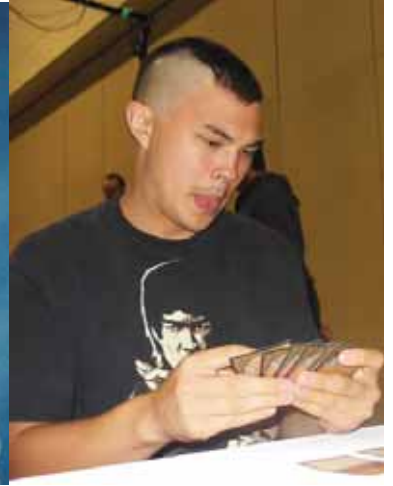

2017

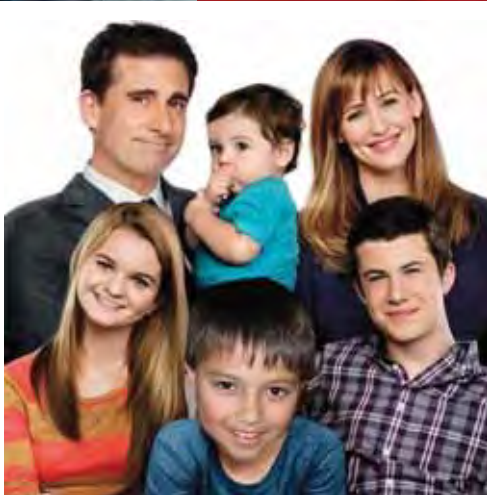

2018

1995

2005

2007

2008

2011

2015

82

72

2
0
1
7

2018

2019

2020

2016

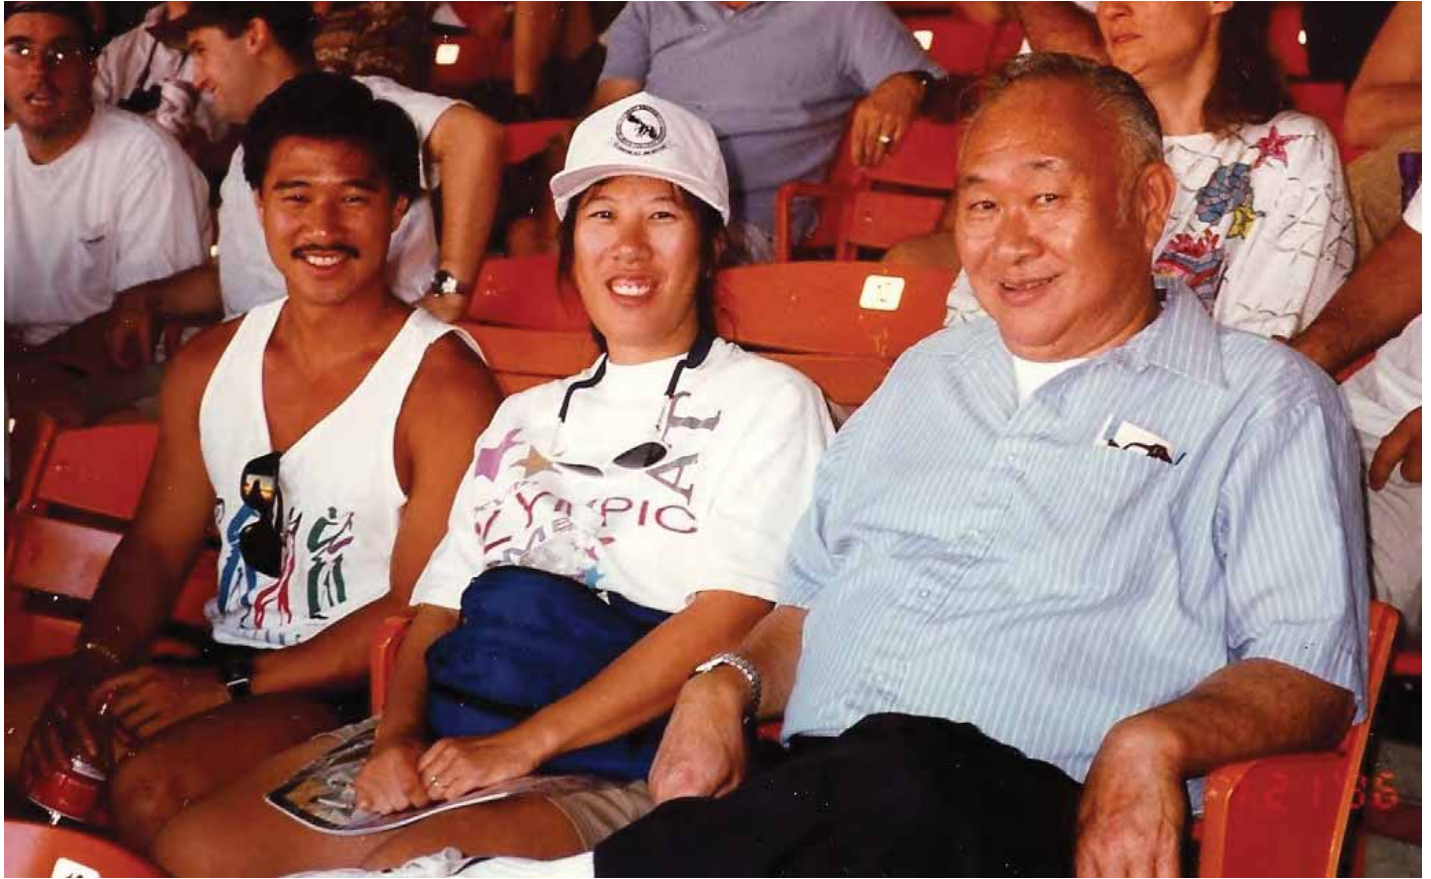

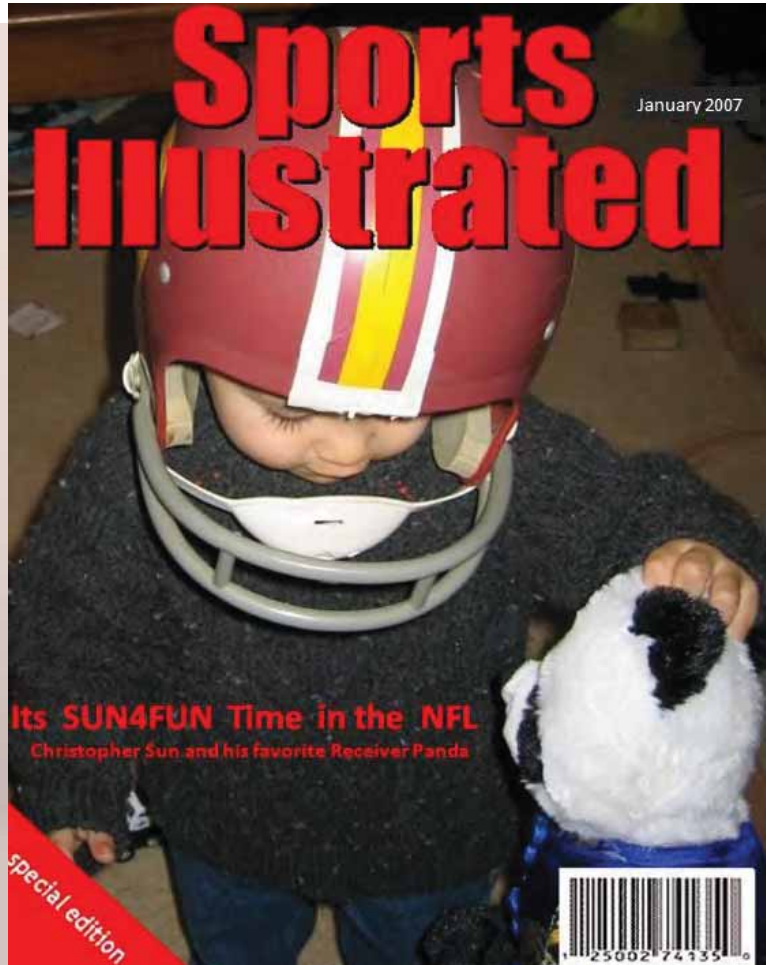

[ăz{ Ę e xăÇ|ĚÇ ECDJ

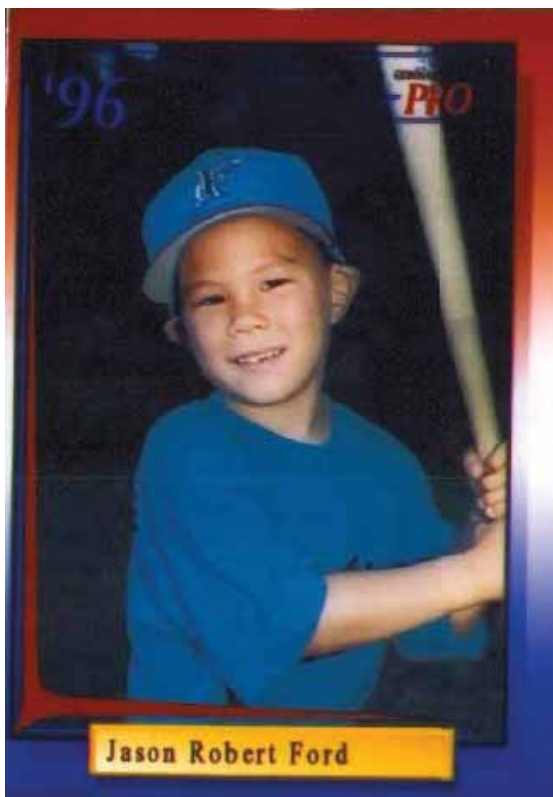

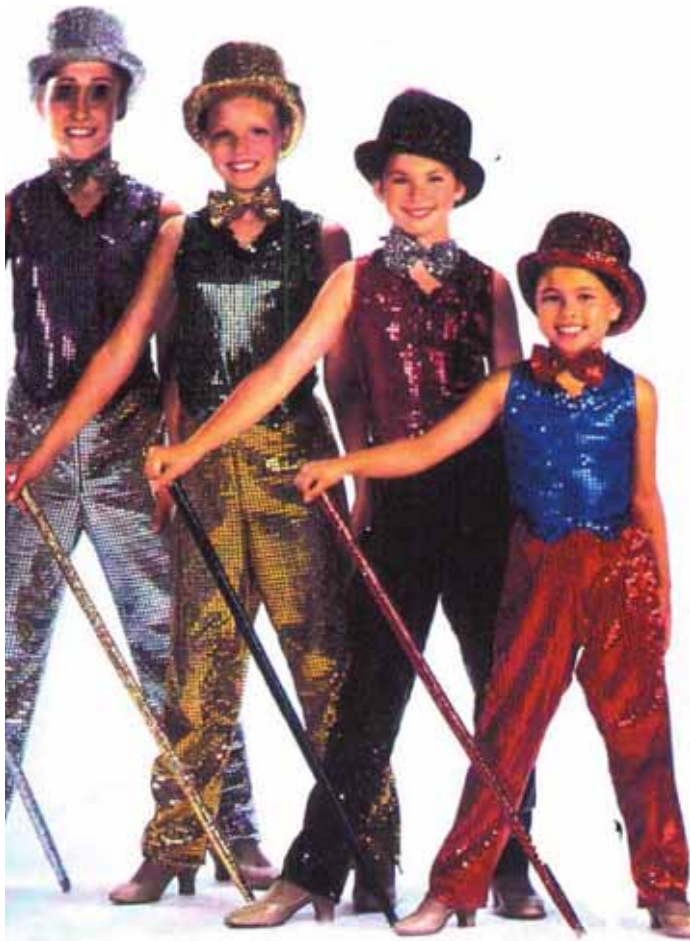

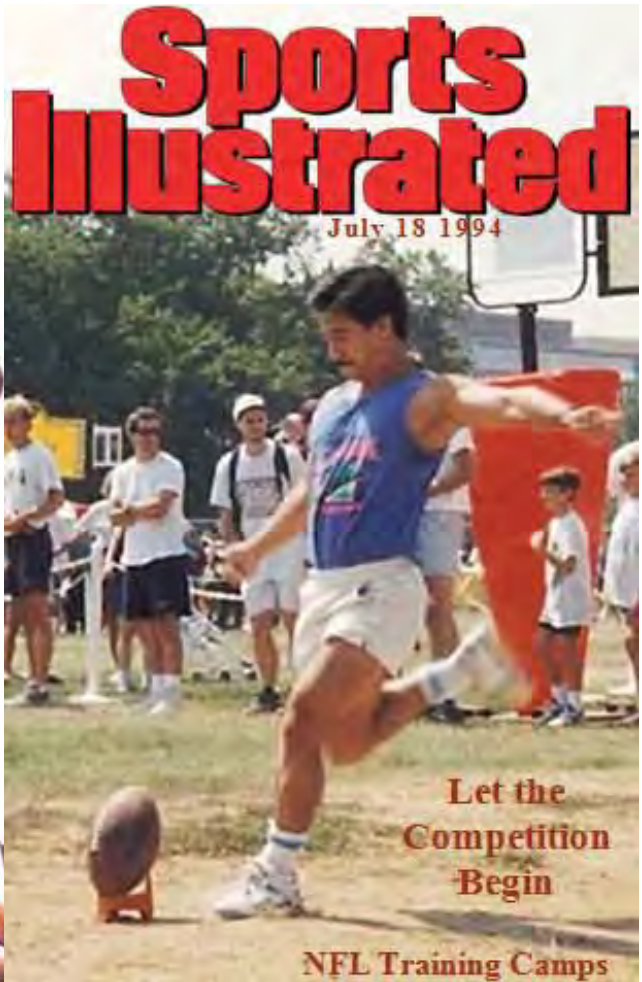

ZOMBIE PANDEMIC

U.S. Department of Health and Human Services
Centers for Disease Control and Prevention

LIYUAN GARDEN

LIYUAN GARDEN

China-Born Chicago G.I. Wounded

Pfc. Jay Y. Sun Jr., 22 a Chicago youth born in China, has been wounded in the Korean fighting.

PFC. SUN

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Jay Y. Sun Sr., of 5645 Drexel blvd., young Jay came to the United States when he was 5 years old. He is a graduate of Marshall High School.

His father is the owner of the Chinese Emporium, 149 Cermak rd., Chinatown department store and importing firm.

"I DIDN'T like fighting against Chinese, but I was fighting for my country the United States," Jay wrote in a letter to his mother.

He has relatives in Hong Kong, Canton and Formosa," his mother, Mrs. Margaret Sun told the Daily News.

Jay was struck by shrapnel April 22 near Pusong while fighting with an engineer unit. His right leg was broken in several places.

HE HOPES his leg won't keep him from playing baseball," his mother said.

"He was first baseman for the Chinatown Dragons, a team sponsored by the Chinese Merchants Association."

"Jay spoke about playing with the White Sox, although his father is a Cub fan," his mother said.

Jay is in Fitzsimmons General Hospital, Denver, where he was flown shortly after being wounded. Doctors say it may be a

Patient Of The Week

PFC. JAY Y. SUN, JR., has a record very different from most of our decorated heroes. He has been in the Army less than a year, overseas less than a month, and now he is back in the United States wearing a Purple Heart and the Korean service ribbon.

Jay Y Sun Jr. (Ben Cheong, "Lefty") passed away peacefully at Casey House/Montgomery Hospice (Rockville MD) on November 14th, 2019 at 89 years of age, He leaves behind his loving wife, Elaine E (Hugh) Sun; his children Keith Sun and Maureen Sun Ford, her husband Michael Ford; three grandchildren, Jaclyn Ford, Jason Ford and Christopher Sun; and sisters, Sue Jean Louie and Sue Fern Gee. He was loved and will be missed by many.

Jay was born Bingchuang Xie (anglicized to Ben Cheong/Jay Ben Cheong) on November 25, 1929 in China. The PanWen building, part of LiYuan Gardens, in Kaiping China (now a UNESCO site) was his father's house. In 1935, he came to the US with his brother, Jay Ben Kun, who died shortly thereafter in an accident. Growing up in Chicago, IL, he earned the lifetime nickname of "Lefty". He officially adopted his father's anglicized name (Jay Y Sun) when he joined the US Army and served in Korea. Wounded in a land mine in 1952, he spent a year recovering at Fitzsimons Army Hospital, in Denver, and was awarded the Purple Heart for his service. Jay married Elaine Elizabeth Hugh in 1955 and graduated with a Bachelor's Degree in Accounting from Northwestern University in 1957. Working for the Internal Revenue Service, Jay relocated with his family to Arlington, Virginia in 1961 before finally settling in 1963 in their current home in Alexandria, Virginia. He worked for the IRS, often traveling to various data centers, until his retirement in 1987. Much of his retirement was spent extensively traveling the world and visiting family and friends. When at home, Jay loved cooking breakfast and serving as a tour guide to visiting guests.

